What went well?

We've successfully merged a lot of branches. All the goals for this week were successfully done. We are staying on course for how much we need to do to finish in time. Workprogress is much more visible now that we know how to have subtasks and acceptance criteria within every user story.

What went bad?

Specifically when implementing so that the notifications won't be sent during the night, there was a lack of knowledge on how to implement that. We tried a lot of implementations where none of them seemed to work. At the end of the week we managed to make it work. It turns out, it was a lot simpler implementation than we thought.

What can we learn from that?

Work together to solve issues that arise earlier so that they do not stump our progress. Also show some more effort when it comes to researching a problem, such as thinking about different things to search up and not just sitting and reading the same forum posts.

How can we use that new knowledge for the next sprint?

If needed we can adapt mid sprint to divide work resources to where it's needed the most. We want to continue working with Trello as we have done this week.
