We had some issues with Github Inspector and had to use the built in Github Insights function instead. This page however is a bit weird since we've had some issues and made some mistakes when committing. First of all, Liam and Erik had some problems with getting GitHub to work inside Android Studio. Even though we both followed the same instructions as the other ones in our team, it just didn't wanna work for us. However, at the end of week 4, all of the team members got GitHub working and during the time it didn't, we worked on a local copy instead to still get work done while we were figuring out the problem. Liam also only worked in only one branch before merging it into the main branch, "Liam's GUI 2".

The reason why we have over 20 000 commits and deletions is because Christina accidentally committed gradle files to main which led to massive amounts of lines added. Ludvig then added these to gitignore which counted it as him removing all those lines. Oliver also had some issues with connecting Android Studio to Github and made some commits without using an account. These commits can be seen as done by "Oliver", but they do not show up in the Contributors page in picture 1. They do however show up on the pulse page in picture 2. The pulse page only goes back for one month so it is missing commits done during the other half of the project.

Since we posted our personal and team reflections on github some of the commits are related to that as well.
